About

Like regular Witcher Potions, a powdered potion is taken orally. Unlike regular potions however, they require no bottle, as their powdered form allows them to be transported in small bags or even small metal containers which take up much less space than a bottle would. As the substances are bound in a dry form, chemical decomposition due to endothermic or exothermic influences on the compound are much less a factor.

History

Powdered potions were an experiment by the Gryphon School, which sought a way to make the transportation and use of potions easier. Due to the processes used to achieve the right chemical balances, only certain potions could be recreated in powdered form and retain their potency. In the end the experiment was deemed a failure, and discontinued. The Formulae for the powdered potions that were created, however, were not destroyed.

Trivia

- Powdered Potions / Elixirs were mentioned by the polish TV series "The Hexer" and can be seen used by Geralt in episode 3.
